

Student Reflections on Interview

I have interviewed Mrs Anfield. It is my pleasure to have a chance to share her experience. I have known more about poor that some of the children even never see a doctor before. After listen to her experience, I am being more grateful for what I have now and I desire to help more people in the future. For example, I have work in Cambodia with the church and I will go there again because I know how it feels to help poor and sick babies.

Hiu Yeung (Rachel)

I had an interview with Mrs Birdseye. This is the first time that I have a chat and interview about the voluntary event. I was surprised that the people there were humble and appreciate for what the volunteer did. I admired the volunteer for giving up their own time to help people that were poor. I learnt to be humble, generous and kind to other, and appreciate for what we've got. I will do more donations and go to some undeveloped countries as a volunteer, because I really want to help.

Name: Dr Janice Fletcher

I used to think that volunteering in a third world country would be a really hard thing to do because of the basic equipment and living condition. After the interview with Dr. Fletcher, my opinion towards volunteering has been changed greatly. Through the information she provided me she looked at 129 children in four days, discovered various kinds of ailments and congenital diseases, which actually helped the children. She also told me the team had to walk for five hours to reach the village where the clinic was located yet it was not accredited for giving birth; I was shocked by that fact thinking of how hard it would be for a pregnant woman there to labor in a decent sterile hospital.

After the interview my understanding of volunteering has completely changed, I would definitely be happy if I can have a chance to help people suffering from poverty, starvation and health issues.

Jane Hunter

Through this experience, I have gained and learnt lots of knowledge and benefits from it. This experience has changed my understanding of the altruistic ideas. This interview has also changed me my way of thinking by my interviewee's kindness, she told me it is very important to be nice to people, teenagers should also participate in this experience instead of overly concentrate in relationships and friendships. I have also learnt as young people I should try more new experience to understand what my true interests are; therefore I might participate in this public health mission in the future.

Lai Chan (Candy)

I have an interview with Mr. Hilary Regan about his volunteer experience in Nepal. His main job is a screening process where they were looking to see if the patients have any specific diseases. I think the trip to Nepal as a volunteer worker is an altruistic activity because it can promote good and improve human health in developing countries. I would like to be a volunteer worker in the future so I can have a chance to help people who are suffering poverty and health issues.

Tsz Ching Lee (Sabrina)

My interviewee was Mrs. Davis, from this interview I was learnt many experience and knowledge her. I have understood its great thing to have an opportunity being a volunteer. People must be give up something important as they being a volunteer, such as time, family and so on. However, if I have an opportunity to being a volunteer, I would like to understand their life, than we can cherish more our life.
